The Canadian Standards Association sets the criteria for Standard W47.1. Based on the type of work to be undertaken a company may be certified for Fusion Welding of Steel in one of three Divisions. This standard sets the criteria for companies seeking certification for both steel and aluminum Resistance Welding. Companies who wish to be certified under this standard are required to qualify their Welding Supervisors and their Welding Engineers, develop and qualify their Company's Welding Procedures for Approval and qualify their Welding personnel (welders or operators).
